EGBERT'S TRIUMPH

THERE are times when the Count's foxy face assumes a look of sad, weary disappointment and he looks as if he will stop his career of swindling and posing and go straight. This was not one of those times. His red-furred, sharp-nosed head was close to that of Loopy the Lizard as they closely studied an ancient parchment map.

"We found it, all right," said Loopy in triumph. "The treasure chart that shows where old Pirate Pete buried his wealth in Thistle Thicket. Count, old boy, we'll be rich! Of course, there's all that pick and shovel work to dig it up, but—"

"Loopy," said the Count, "you and I are practical people. We're not fitted for hard labor. Maybe we can trick Egbert into digging that swag up for us. Here he comes along the path now. Give me the map and duck behind that bush."

The Count dropped the parchment on the path and whisked Loopy into hiding. Moments passed, and Egbert, hopping clumsily, came opposite. He paused. He goggled. He picked up the map. His beak opened and he emitted a squawk of inspired joy. He scuttled away toward Thistle Thicket.

When Egbert was gone, Loopy studied the Count with worried eyes. "I don't get it," he protested. "Egbert's got the map. He'll dig up the treasure—"

"And we'll get it!" said the Count. "Remember all the tales about how Pirate Pete's ghost haunts his hoard? Egbert remembers, too. As soon as he brings the money out, we'll set up a ghastly howl. Egbert will tear out of there like a rocket. And we'll grab the loot, without having turned a spadeful of that heavy, heavy sod!"

Together Loopy and the Count stole to Thistle Thicket. Egbert had already marked a large, jagged cross on the spot indicated by the map, and had found a pick and a shovel. With all the strength of his clumsy little body he began to burrow. "Oh, boy," the two listening plotters heard him say to himself. "Oh, boy, oh boy, oh boy! All that pirate gold, just for little old deserving me!"

Loopy and the Count nudged each other and tried to keep from laughing. They watched from behind a big tree, while Egbert dug deep, deeper, deeper still. His whole form disappeared in the hole.

"I hear his spade clinking on metal," whispered the Count to Loopy. "It's almost time."

Egbert, deep in the hole, was scraping loose soil away from around something—a massive, metal-clamped chest. "Oh boy," he panted. "This looks like what I'm after." He caught the handles and heaved. "Oops! It weighs a ton—"

With a mighty effort he heaved the chest up to ground level and paused to wipe his perspiring brow.

"Now," muttered the Count, "Yell your loudest and scariest, Loopy."

Together they raised a weird, creepy wail. "Ooo-oooo! Ooooooooo! Who dares dig for my dough? I'll carry him away to ghostland!"

"Squarrrrk!" shrilled Egbert in terror. He had not the strength left to get out and run, and he shoved his head, ostrich-like, into the loose dirt at the bottom of the pit. The Count and Loopy seized the handles of the chest and, exerting all their strength, lifted it and ran, ran, ran. Far away from Thistle Thicket they found a quiet place among some tangled vines. There they pried open the lid of the rusty old chest. It was full of—

"Rocks!" yelled Loopy in disgust. "Pirate Pete didn't bury any gold, after all."

"Here's a note among the rocks," said the Count. Together they read:

"Under this chest, weighted down to make a protecting barrier, is my fortune. Let him who has the courage and industry to reach it be the one to profit by it."

"Quick, quick!" cried the Count. "Back to the hole." Back they raced, but Egbert was gone. And they found nothing beneath the place where the chest had been found.

In his own modest home, Egbert was counting the broad gold pieces that filled an ancient silver teapot. He had to count several times, using all his fingers and toes, and even then he could not count high enough to decide how much he had found.

"Good thing that ghost whooped at me," he said to himself. "Otherwise I'd never have dug my face into the dirt and found Pirate Pete's REAL treasure trove! Won't the Count be surprised when I tell him about this?"

I don't care how old or young you are, or how ashamed of your present physical condition you may be. If you can flex your arm I can add SOLID MUSCLE to your biceps—in double-quick time! I can broaden your shoulders, strengthen your back; add inches to your chest, give you a vise-like grip, make those legs of yours powerful, shoot new strength into your backbone, exercise those inner organs, cram your body full of vigor and red-blooded vitality!

WHAT'S MY SECRET? "DYNAMIC TENSION!" That's the ticket! The identical natural method that changed me from a 97-lb. weakling to the world's champion! Thousands are becoming marvelous physical specimens — my way. No gadgets or contraptions. You simply use the DORMANT muscle-power in your own God-given body — watch it increase double-quick into solid MUSCLE.

"Dynamic Tension" is easy! Only 15 minutes a day in your own home. You can use "Dynamic Tension" almost unconsciously every minute — walking, bending over, etc. — to BUILD MUSCLE and VITALITY. You'll be using the method which many great athletes use — fighters, wrestlers, baseball, football players, etc.
